Dear Jeffrey,

Thank you very, very much for your email. I have been thinking about you for the past week, but I have honestly not wanted to disturb you as you have been very kind and generous with your time this autumn.

First of all, I hope that you are well wherever in the world you are!

I am sincerely and very very sorry that you think that I was un-polite when we last met. I asked the question to show my interest for Reid Hoffman and his background – NOT to be shameless, bold, and with no other intention than to show him that I was interested. I felt that it was too egoistic of me to sit there and only speak about my trip to Zimbabwe and myself. May I kindly ask, in this particular situation; what would you have advised me to talk about? What questions would have been fine to ask? I must note, however, that it was such a privilege to meet you again and Reid Hoffman that morning.

went to [REDACTED] the 8th of December as planned but a problem arose. I had prior to departure, had meetings with the person responsible for visas at [REDACTED]. I had been told that all my papers were in order. However, I had not been advised that I needed an American social security number to work for them (I have been able to use my [REDACTED] one for five years). I acknowledge that it was not my fault (as I had made sure that I fulfilled the requirements) but that I could not start to work until I have an American social security number. As it takes about 2 - 6 weeks to get one, I had to return home to [REDACTED] (as it is too expensive to be in NY without a salary). I will return to NYC again after Christmas (probably before New Years Eve). Last week I got another possibility from an investor in NYC.

Jeffrey; I cannot enough articulate how sorry I am that my behavior came across as unpolite.

I also wanted to wish you a fantastic Christmas; may it be filled with much joy.
With warmest and best regards,
